Ein KunstwerkVon Milena BretzIch war sehr gespannt auf dieses Buch, habe eine groartige Liebesgeschichte mit Substanz erwartet. Es ist nicht eine simple lesbische Liebesgeschichte wie es ja so viele gibt,nein es ist eine Geschichte mit Realitätsbezug. Sie zeigt das die Liebe zwischen zwei Frauen eben nicht immer "einfach" war und immer noch ist. Außerdem spielt die Apartheid und der Umgang mit ihm auf unterschiedlichste Weise auf. Amina und Miriam ziehen den Leser von Anfang bis Ende in eine andere Welt und man kann das Buch nicht aus der Hand legen. Shamim Sarif ist eine großartige Schriftstellerin. Ich kann das Buch nur jedem empfehlen... Es ist ein Abenteuer und für ein paar Stunden vergisst man alles um sich herum. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Beautiful film Von Leseratte South Africa 1952. A white government bullies its people with racial discrimination called apartheid. Young Indian Amina wears trousers - really inappropriate for a lady. She owns a little cafe together with her black business partner - highly illegal, officially he is just a waiter. Amina meets Miriam, of Indian origin too - but married and contained she behaves in an inconspicuous way. The new friendship gives her the courage to find her own way and to make her point against her intrusive husband. Not only a love story but an interesting picture of life in an oppressive political world. Not only for women.

Kurzbeschreibung In 1950's South Africa, free-spirited Amina has broken all the rules of her own conventional Indian community, and the new apartheid-led government, by running a cafe with Jacob her coloured business partner. When she meets Miriam, a young wife and mother, their unexpected attraction pushes Miriam to question the rules that bind her. When Amina helps Miriam's sister-in-law to hide from the police, a chain of events is set in motion that changes both women forever. The World Unseen transports us to a vibrant, colourful world, a world that divides white from black and women from men, but one that might just allow an unexpected love to survive. Pressestimmen 'An impressive debut. [Sarif's] story brings together the descriptive power of the novelist with the screenwriter's mastery of dialogue: a overarching vision of a community shackled by race and gender, which also registers the small shocks and struggles of two women at its centre' The Times Kurzbeschreibung In 1950's South Africa, free-spirited Amina has broken all the rules of her own conventional Indian community, and the new apartheid-led government, by running a cafe with Jacob her coloured business partner.
