Von Anna Salamatin This is the 3rd installment to a most remarkable series, It follows smooth and true from the first two books where we see some old friends that we learn more about as they continue to develop, as well as new characters, some of which will become friends, comrades and mates. I'm still delighted with the every kind of mythological characters with a twist,... most can shift to being humanoid. One of the newbies is a little round fur ball called a Ilthe. his name is Tollo. generally speaking, Ilthe's are guardians of the dragons but will go pretty much wherever they are needed. Tollo has some unique abilities and I'm not sure we've seen all of them yet.....Anyway, Golix, that most vile of Unicorns is moving forward with his plans for the 5 Kingdoms while Draven and company try to gather forces and at the same time figure out what Golix plans are. Why is he going back and forth to the human world? What is he doing? Then, Tyleios Cannis, interim King of Bra'ka turns on the very people he promised to protect. That's all I will say about that except to say, it's only the beginning... The end game is so diabolical, the sacrifices made, the loss of lives, all the suffering and it may not have been enough! It becomes clear that this has been years in the planning. Will the five Kingdoms fall? This is one journey you will have to make for yourself. I know I was shaken to my very core more than once, and was brought to tears several times....Maragret Taylor has a talent, she can make you chuckle and then cry in the span of a couple of sentences, and have you thanking her for it, as I am about to do now!... I know it ain't over yet M. but wherever this going, I'm in! This is one fantastical voyage and I thank you for allowing me to on board!
