KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. What was the point?Von Helen HancoxThis was a romance with a rather unusual storyline. Our heroine, Phillipa Carstairs, got engaged to a man who promptly disappeared. It's been almost nine months since she saw him and she's heard nothing from or of him - should she continue to wait, could he be dead, should she move on?Phillipa's grandfather suggests that Phillipa asks Maxwell, Lord Montrose, to look for the fianc. Although Phillipa thinks he's a bit of a fop, more interested in his clothing than anything else, she asks him and he agrees to do a bit of digging to see if he can discover the errant fianc. But he's not quite the fop she thinks he is but is instead a spy for the Crown who knows absolutely everyone. As Phillipa and her grandmother travel with Maxwell to Brighton and then Paris on the trail of her fianc, she may begin to wonder whether she picked the wrong man as a fianc. What was strange about this book was that many of the plot threads seemed a bit, well, pointless. Phillipa's grandmother appears to be undergoing some kind of personality transformation and behaving incongruously - but nothing much is made of that in the end. Phillipa's search for her fianc sort of peters out. Her relationship with Maxwell doesn't really grow organically. She comes across as a rather weak and naive woman and Maxwell is never easy to get to know. I found the book overall rather disappointing and not particularly believable.
